It would be really helpful if the IEEE referencing style is added to the online referencing tool on the library portal. Also, sometimes I would find sources but they’re not available, there is no link to access it and there is no request option on them so I could obtain them, it would be better if those sources didn’t appear in the search results because they waste a lot of my time trying to trace how to access them. Personally, I would like if it is possible to add any online copies of novels and self–development books.

Various technical issues limit the access to subscribed content. I have raised this point with library services times and again but seems that issue is still there and can't be solved. I think libse should resolve technical issues. For example when i try to access articles through e resources, my access gets suspended after some time. Which really impacts the productivity. I think all the content is good, It would be better if you include magazines like the economist and the newyork times.

All good
Please increase and update the list of scientific papers and books as I would still find that there are some fundamental books and high cited articles that either abscent in the database or required a request. I believe by creating open access thorugh all of the files would increase productivity. Personally, by facing a required request in a particular paper makes me refuse my searching
You can improve by adding more websites to enter. For example, being able to read some math questions.

More printing balance for PG, we have a lot of research work and a lot of papers and also courses and qualifying exam. The 100 AED specified for us per semester is very very low. please, mention this to whom it may concern. For example, I have a medical issue in my eyes and can't absolutely focus to read from the screen for 1 continues hour, How can I deal with that ??!!

I just face problems with the hours the library is running for. Most times, we need a place to work and the library closes so early. Masdar library used to be a great place for late night studying. Really appreciated snacks available at the library during exams. It was refreshing and was a means through which a number of students knew about the library for the first time. Now the exams and snacks are gone but the newcomers have still remained, leaving us sometimes with few chairs to sit on . Notwithstanding I believe all of us are looking forward to exams again if for nothing else, at least for the refreshing snacks

Undergraduate students should be aware that the Study Rooms are booked from the online portal, and they cannot just occupy a Study room. Moreover, they should have an iota of consideration to senior researchers who have been in the university for some years and know all the rules of the library. This relates to one group of undergraduate male students claiming a study room because they believed those rooms are for 'group study' and hence they were prioritized even though the room was officially booked on another Researcher's name. They refused to leave the room and instead acted as if the researcher who had been working in Khalifa University for about 3 years did not know the rules.

I would like to suggest an idea that the library can implement. The idea is this, for readers like me who read printed books a question should pop for every user asking them the title of the book they would like the library to add. Then the library can see the data and if eligible it could provide the most demanded book.

The operation hours have been extended, the entry library loan service has been activated, and the service has been expanded to all of the city's libraries.
More articles about the humanities not just scientific there must be another way to let students know about the available sources in the library i don’t maybe most students know but for me i don’t read every single email and now i regret it
